"I just want to sell my old textbook without losing a quarter of the money to fees and shipping, and maybe find a trustworthy person to buy concert tickets from without worrying about scams."

BIOGRAPHY

- Background: Bright and social student balancing demanding studies with vibrant social life
- Financial Situation: Lives on fixed monthly allowance from family, constantly stressed about tight budget
- Social Life: Active in student clubs, uses social media daily to stay connected and learn about campus events
- Independence: Resourceful and independent, managing life in a different city from family

GOALS

- Sell used textbooks and electronics to earn extra cash for the semester
- Find affordable second-hand items (calculator, desk lamp) from other students
- Connect with verified students from her department for study groups
- Get tickets for campus parties and events safely from other students
- Save money by avoiding high commission and shipping fees

FRUSTRATIONS

- High Fees: Losing 15-23% of earnings to commission fees on platforms like Dolap
- Unnecessary Costs: Shipping costs for items that could be picked up locally on campus
- Lack of Trust: Feeling unsafe with anonymous, unverified users on Facebook groups
- Fragmented Experience: Switching between 3-4 different apps for campus life management
- Inefficiency: Wasting time on generic platforms without relevant academic items or campus events

KEY CHARACTERISTICS

- Budget-Conscious: Constantly compares prices and looks for deals, feels direct impact of inflation
- Tech-Savvy: Uses multiple apps daily, comfortable with online shopping and digital platforms
- Socially Motivated: Wants to build strong network of friends and contacts within university
- Safety-Aware: Heard scam stories from friends, uneasy with anonymous online users
